Dear Parent

"By education I mean an all-round drawing out of the best in child and man-body, mind and spirit. Literacy is not the end of education or even the beginning."

- M.K. Gandhi

Education certainly is a means to all-round progress of man. In other words, the pathway to human-development goes through the lanes of education.

The utility, significance and importance of education are inevitable at all levels in all walks of life. It develops into the most beautiful and valuable ornament of human life.

We, at MVN, believe that true learning happens only when there is ownership and responsibility on part of learners and the educators. The reason behind the smooth and cohesive conduct of the events and their massive success is the ownership and responsibility undertaken by the staff and the students. In fact, this is the teaching and learning environment we aspire to create in our school; where in students and educators are not only responsible but are also self-driven individuals.

It has been rightly said by sir Winston Churchill, 'The price of greatness is responsibility.' If we want our children to be great, then it is equally important that we teach them to be responsible. Right from respecting parents and teachers, getting ready for school on time, attending school regularly, interacting with teachers and fellow students, completing assigned tasks, thinking and referencing and learning what is taught pursuing hobbies and interests to remain active, helping the society and following rules and regulations are all part of their responsibilities.

The personality of an individual keeps evolving through their lifetime. When the children begin taking responsibilities from a young age, they grow up to be responsible individuals and better citizens.

We take this responsibility and aim to preserve and enhance the highest standards of excellence and prepare the students for all possibilities for we accept that if your actions inspire others to dream more, learn more, do more and become more, then you are a true leader.

Wishes and prayers for all!

Regards

FROM COUNSELLOR'S DESK

Dear Parent

Greetings! Through the ups and downs of everyday parenting, parents sometimes struggle with sudden rise in some undesirable behaviors in children. These may include telling lies, arguing, low confidence, jealousy and even aggression. Sometimes no obvious reason could be identified for these.

For such situations, pattern of communication between parent and child holds the key. A parent 's love is boundless for the child but unfortunately many a times, this love is not expressed enough with right words in the right way. This leads to many behavior problems in children.

Following are some suggestions for parents which may be included in their day-to-day communication with children.

1. I made a mistake....sorry. As parents, we are not perfect and we can make mistakes. Accepting a genuine mistake then and there in front of the child sets a good example for the child to follow. It also teaches him/her that there is no shame in accepting one's mistake. Please don't forget to share your learning from that mistake as well.
2. I don't know this....let us figure this out together. As parents, you don't automatically know everything. Displaying your learning attitude is a great lesson for the child.
3. Can we talk about what happened? I want to know your side of the story. I really want to understand why you did what you did. Your feelings are valid and it is safe to express them with me. If you speak this to your child, your child will never feel frustrated, unheard or angry. Validating feelings is very important because after validation only, you can move the child to correction.
4. I respect you and expect you to be respectful to me. Let us treat them with respect so they learn self respect and respecting others.
5. I can see you are really trying and I am proud of you for that. This will teach them the value of effort and build on their motivation.
6. It is ok if you have a different opinion than mine. We need not to agree on everything. I like your honesty. Please help children develop their own opinions and give them opportunity to voice their opinions. This will build assertiveness and confidence in their personalities.

7. I forgive you for this mistake and I want to trust you again. Children will never lie if they have this trust verbalized from a parent. Reminding and judging them over past mistakes will restrict them from trying again.

8. Let us pause this conversation. I need a break; we will talk about it in some time. This is a good way to teach them controlling impulsiveness, developing patience and calmness.

9. I will always be with you and love you no matter what. I believe in you. Children are growing learning small human beings. They deserve to hear this reassurance more often.

10. I am so grateful you are my child. I like spending time with you. No amount of love and compassion will make your child incapable or weak. It is rather opposite. Love and compassion communicated rightly will help your child feel safe, important and confident.

Let us help our children spread wings.

Best wishes,

Archana Bapat
